A Front Row Seat to Myth-Busting

Ornithologist Auguste von Bayern, with a jackdaw, from the NOVA episode Bird Brain

“What a bird brain!” “You’re a Neanderthal!” Not so long ago, these were taunts. But, thanks to recent research by scientists and the fine documentaries on PBS, we know better.

And I’m just the person to be thrilled by these discoveries. When I was a kid, my no-nonsense grandmother called me a bird brain every time I forgot my rubber slippers on our neighbors’ porch, which was often. And just last month, a 23andme.com ancestry test turned up Neanderthal DNA in my family.

When you sit back and view Nature or NOVA on Wednesday nights on PBS Hawai’i, you sometimes have a front row seat to myth-busting. In vibrant video, you see that some of the ideas and conclusions printed in our old textbooks have been blown away.

As depicted in the recent NOVA episode Bird Brain, birds are far from empty-headed. They make great use of their small neuron-packed brains. They turn pebbles and sticks into tools; they plan multiple steps to solve problems; and some even “read” human faces. Put birds to the test with puzzles – and they can figure out when to defer a reward in order to snag a bigger one later.

In NOVA’s Decoding Neanderthals, we learned that these hominoids were not the brutish, knuckle-dragging simpletons we’d conjured. They were powerfully built, yes, but they also had large brains. They were adept at tool-making, and in fact, may have developed the first synthetic product, a type of glue. It was a very tough life in the Ice Age, and it’s unlikely that most Neanderthals lived past age 30.

Within the last decade, it’s been confirmed that Neanderthals interbred with their close cousins, homo sapiens. Many of us of European or Asian ancestry carry snippets of Neanderthal DNA. That’s just what my brother’s genetic test showed. In fact, he has more than the average amount.

A prevailing theory holds that our homo sapiens ancestors vanquished the Neanderthals. With the recent genetic evidence, another theory merits consideration: Through mating, the Neanderthals – with their smaller populations – were simply absorbed into homo sapiens life.

Look for a brand-new PBS program about Neanderthals this month, Neanderthals: Meet Your Ancestors on Wednesday, February 28 at 9:00 pm. I suspect there’ll be further re-branding of my ancient forebears.

We want to thank Dr. Belinda A. Aquino for generously sponsoring the broadcasts of both Nature and NOVA on PBS Hawai’i. A retired University of Hawai’i political science professor, Dr. Aquino is an internationally recognized authority on contemporary Philippine affairs. She tells me that she savors these programs about natural phenomena because they inspire new ways to think about humanity and the world around us.

And I’d like to thank you, too, for your support of PBS Hawai’i’s role of adding new perspectives and context to our collective understanding of history and current affairs. Myth-busting is a byproduct!

Aloha nui,

Leslie

Weldon Kekauoha

Monday, February 26, 7:30 pm

By Emilie Howlett

Hawaiian musician Weldon Kekauoha has been crafting beloved musical arrangements and sharing them with Hawai'i, the continental U.S. and beyond for over 30 years. He's enjoyed a successful solo career, amassing multiple Nā Hōkū Hanohano awards and, in 2014, a Grammy nomination. For the past 15 years, he has been going to Japan to perform, finding an enthusiastic audience there that has embraced the Hawaiian culture.

Kekauoha gave a soulful performance in PBS Hawai'i's Harry and Jeanette Weinberg Multimedia Studio, for the taping of our newest Nā Mele. In this episode of our traditional Hawaiian music series, guitarist Jack Ofoia, bassist Alika Boy Kalauli IV and hula dancer Yuko Hashimoto accompany Kekauoha with a performance set against dramatic photo backdrops of Hawai'i landscapes.

Identifying himself as a contemporary artist with a traditional foundation, Kekauoha goes in-depth about the meaning behind his songs, his experience as a longtime performer and the importance of music in his life.

He also addresses an incident at the Halekulani Hotel in 2013. While enjoying the pool during a weekend getaway at the Waikīkī hotel, Kekauoha and his family were asked by security guards to verify that they were guests. The guards were acting on another hotel guest's suspicion that the Kekauohas did not belong at the pool because they were locals.

Kekauoha vented about the incident on Facebook. The post went viral, sparking widespread outrage. The hotel apologized, but for Kekauoha to be a target of discrimination in the same neighborhood where he and many other Hawaiian musicians made a name for themselves was a bitter irony for him.

Today, Kekauoha says he doesn't harbor any ill feelings toward the hotel. "Hopefully it brought a little bit more of an awareness," he says. "Racism can rear its head often, and we've got to always be vigilant to try and keep it in its place." Thankfully, as Kekauoha knows intimately from his world travels, nothing breaks down barriers of difference better than the art of sharing music.

In these excerpts from an interview with Kekauoha and Jason Suapaia, PBS Hawai'i's Vice President of Integrated Media Production, Kekauoha highlights the many ways music has touched his life.

PBS Hawai'i: How important is music in perpetuating the Hawaiian culture?

Weldon Kekauoha: Very, very important. People say hula has been able to sustain that part of the culture, and from there, so much of the [Hawaiian] Renaissance has been able to flourish. More interest has grown because of hula, and music has always been there in the background.

Kekauoha, left, performs on Nā Mele with bassist Alika Boy Kalauli IV and hula dancer Yuko Hashimoto.

I think music is a little bit of a different animal, only because it's so open for creativity and influence. If you look at so much of the history of Hawaiian music – in Hawai'i, on the U.S. mainland, even abroad – it's incredible to see how much the music has changed from being super traditional, and then going way out from it, to being commercialized. And I mean that in a good way. There's of course some negative aspects to it, and then "Hollywood-ized," if you will. Then it took a long while to bring it back [to the traditional], because it just got so way out from the original intent of our culture. But it's neat to see the revival of all that is Hawaiian, and the new pride that has been fostered from it. I'm looking forward to seeing what happens in the next 20 years.

How has music touched your life, and your family's life, and what would it be without music?

I can't imagine how it would be without music. It's always been there, it's always been in the background for me at some level. And obviously, now, where I am, it's what I do and it's what I'm known for. I feel blessed that I get to do what I love to do. Oftentimes, people are looking for something to do that they enjoy, and I think if it wasn't for music, I would probably embrace whatever it is that I was doing, and that would become perhaps my passion and I'd make it work. That's your job. If you're not happy, you gotta change. But if you get to know your job well, and you love it, it's a different type of enjoyment.

In this case, it's always been something I've enjoyed since I was a young boy. To be able to carry it over into sustaining me, my family and my life all this time, I've been lucky. And it's still a work in progress. It's like any other business; you gotta kind of take care of it, and try to make sure you have something good to sell, something good to give people. And you just continue with good relationships and good performances, and all that that entails. Having a good business is pretty much what you should shoot for.

When people listen to your music, what do you hope they will get from it?

I just hope that they would like my music, for whatever reason – whether it strikes a chord in them, or reminds them of something. Even I am totally susceptible; I can listen to a song and it just takes me back somewhere. And that's the power of music. I always remember how strong music can be. I just hope [listeners] take away something. I don't expect one song to be like a huge, life-changing moment for anybody, but if I can have a place in someone's heart or mind because of my music, I think that would be my goal. I want them to take away something from my music that they will always remember, whether it's a feeling or the melody.

This interview has been edited for clarity and length.

13 TUESDAY

- 7:30 LONG STORY SHORT WITH LESLIE WILCOX Kanoe and John Miller Kanoe Miller felt drawn to the spotlight at an early age, fantasizing about becoming a Broadway chorus girl or a ballerina. The young Kanoe began taking hula lessons, and her goal shifted to performing hula in Waikīkī. For more than 40 years, Kanoe has been living that dream. You'll often find her biggest cheerleader in the audience: her husband John Miller, a former Aloha Airlines pilot. Just in time for Valentine's Day, Kanoe and John tell the story of their love and reflect on the life they've built together.
- 8:00 WE'LL MEET AGAIN Heroes of 9/11 Join Ann Curry for dramatic reunions between people whose lives intersected on 9/11. Patrick searches for the stranger who comforted him after the disaster, and Tim hopes to thank the fellow chaplain who gave him the strength to carry on.
- 9:00 AMERICAN EXPERIENCE The Bombing of Wall Street Explore the story behind the mostly-forgotten 1920 bombing in the nation's financial center, which left 38 dead and remains unsolved today.

- 10:00 FRONTLINE The Gang Crackdown FRONTLINE examines a slew of killings linked to the MS-13 gang resulting in a crackdown that swept up immigrant teens.

PBS Hawai'i welcomes Pinkalicious & Peterrific to the PBS KIDS lineup.

Based on the best-selling book series by author-illustrator Victoria Kann, Pinkalicious & Peterrific follows the adventures of Pinkalicious and her brother Peter. Pinkalicious imagines creative possibilities everywhere she looks. She is an artist at heart; like most creative people, she sees the world differently from others. She knows what she likes, and she's not afraid to express herself – though she sometimes needs help from Peter and her neighborhood friends.

Designed for children ages 3-5, the new animated series encourages children to engage in the creative arts and self-expression, covering areas such as music, dance and visual arts. "Research shows that participating in the arts strengthens children's cognitive and emotional skills, and leads to higher academic performance," said Executive Producer Dorothea Gillim, from producing station WGBH.

The Pinkalicious & Peterrific television series is part of a multiplatform media experience that will also include digital content for kids, parents and teachers. Links to these resources can be found on pbshawaii.org.

PARTNER PROFILE

Waikiki Health

Sheila Beckham
CEO
Waikiki Health

Waikiki Health has been providing medical and social services to the community for over 50 years. It is the oldest Federally Qualified Health Center in the state, with a mission to provide accessible and affordable services to vulnerable populations, regardless of their ability to pay.

“Waikiki Health is a broadcast sponsor of Insights on PBS Hawai‘i because it shines a spotlight on issues of great importance to Hawai‘i,” said Waikiki Health CEO Sheila Beckham. “Like PBS Hawai‘i, Waikiki Health zeroes in on community concerns – responding with medical and social support needed by vulnerable populations.”

Since 1967, Waikiki Health has continually expanded to meet the ever-increasing demands for its services. The health center recently added 11 new exam rooms to its Makahiki Medical & Dental Clinic in McCully/Mo‘ili‘ili, making it its largest clinic site. It also operates a homeless shelter in Kaka‘ako, Next Step, where clients are helped with job training and housing opportunities. Homeless youth are also provided with meals, medical care, job training and educational services at Youth Outreach in Waikīkī. Waikiki Health also conducts mobile medical outreach to the homeless in collaboration with other partner agencies.

Mahalo a nui loa to Waikiki Health for its support of PBS Hawai‘i. If you or someone you know would like to be a program sponsor, please contact PBS Hawai‘i’s Director of Business Support, Patty Doo, at pdoo@pbshawaii.org or call 808.462.5048.
