The Return of the Hōkūle'a
THURSDAY, JULY 23 AT 8:30 PM

PRESENTS

THURSDAYS AT 8:30 PM

It was 50 years ago, July 26, 1976, when Hōkūle‘a, Hawai‘i’s Polynesian voyaging canoe, arrived back in the islands, returning from its historic trip to Tahiti earlier that year.

PBS Hawai‘i celebrates this milestone by rebroadcasting the station’s live coverage of Hōkūle‘a’s return to Magic Island in Honolulu, where it was greeted by tens of thousands of people. Hawai‘i entertainer Al Harrington anchored the live coverage, providing emotional, pride-filled commentary throughout the 90-minute broadcast.

During this anniversary month, PBS Hawai‘i Presents two more Hōkūle‘a films: Hōkūle‘a: Star of Gladness, which document the construction of the canoe and its launching at Kualoa Regional Park in Windward O‘ahu in 1975; and Voyage of Rediscovery, a film centered around Hōkūle‘a’s two-year voyage to Tahiti, Cook Islands, Samoa, Tonga and New Zealand (Aotearoa) from 1985 to 1987.

In addition, PBS Hawai‘i Presents two films in the We, The Voyagers series that document Polynesians in Taumako in the far southwestern Pacific keeping their canoe building and wayfinding traditions alive.

Hōkūle‘a: Star of Gladness

JULY 16

This documentary, produced in 1975, shares the origins of Hōkūle‘a from conception to the the carving of the canoe from a tree to its launch at Kualoa Beach Park on Windward O‘ahu. It includes, in intricate detail, the blessing and ceremony that had not been seen or practiced in Hawai‘i for hundreds of years.

Polynesians of Taumako, a small island in the Southwestern Pacific, never lost their ancient tradition of building canoes and wayfinding. In this first of a two-part documentary, the elders pass their knowledge to younger generations.

The Return of the Hōkūle‘a

JULY 23

This is the first replay in 50 years of live coverage PBS Hawai‘i provided on July 26, 1976 as Hōkūle‘a returned to Hawai‘i from its inaugural voyage to Tahiti in March of that year. Hosted by media celebrity Al Harrington, the coverage includes interviews, entertainment and cultural protocols as thousands of people turned out to mark the historic event.

See how the people of Taumako navigate challenging weather, open ocean and long distances by relying on ancient knowledge of wind and wave patterns as well as the stars to reach other islands in their group.

Voyage of Rediscovery

JULY 30

This PBS Hawai‘i documentary looks at Polynesian cultural revivals on multiple islands across the South Pacific as the double-hulled sailing canoe Hōkūle‘a visited French Polynesia, Cook Islands, New Zealand (Aotearoa) and Samoa during a two-year voyage from 1985-87. A dance master in the Cook Islands said, “The Hōkūle‘a is Polynesia. It is the foundation and the heavens.” PBS Hawai‘i last broadcast this film in 2001.

LOCAL PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

WEDNESDAYS AT 7:30 PM

We are adding episodes from two cooking series the station produced over the years to the PBS Hawai'i Classics lineup, The Chan-ese Way and The International Kitchen. They join episodes of Pau Hana Years and Spectrum Hawai'i that we began sharing on broadcast and online in 2021.

The Chan-ese Way is hosted by Chef Titus Chan. His 13-part series started in the early 1970s and includes traditional Chinese dishes while exploring the culture and country where the recipes originate. The International Kitchen launched as a stand-alone program in January of 1979 with station executive producer and director Nino Martin as the host. Prior to that, International Kitchen appeared as a segment in a daily program called Hawai'i Now.

July 1 | The Chan-ese Way: Culture & Cooking

Chef Titus Chan explains what viewers can expect in the program while standing outside of a Chinese temple. In his studio kitchen, he espouses the versatility of using a wok for cooking, makes a beef-vegetable stir-fry dish and describes oyster sauce as "Chinese magic sauce..."

July 8 | The International Kitchen: Japanese Dishes

Host Nino Martin is joined by Hanako Gushiken in a beachfront kitchen set at Po'ipū on the south side of Kaua'i preparing traditional Japanese dishes, sanbaizuke (pickled vegetables) and shiraae (vegetables and tofu). Gushiken makes a bonus dish called lettuce sushi.

July 15 | The Chan-ese Way: Steamed Pork Hash

Chef Chan begins the program with a story in Chinatown, Honolulu in a store that sells everything from antiques to chopsticks. Chan says he guarantees you will have good health if you know how to use chopsticks and use them often.

July 22 | The International Kitchen: Walnut Chicken

Martin is joined by chef, teacher and author Madame S.T. Ting Wong, who says she learned to cook by cooking for elders. She adds that celebrities like Barbara Streisand took cooking lessons from her.

July 29 | The Chan-ese Way: Rainbow Soup

Chef Chan begins by asking viewers how much they really know about Chinese soup and describes the wide variety that exists. Then he unveils an enormous king crab that will be part of the soup on the menu.

Next month's new episode of Nā Mele features 'ukulele virtuoso Taimane Gardner. She received her first 'ukulele at age 5. At age 13, she got her first professional job performing with Don Ho in Waikīkī. Blending classical music, flamenco, rock and Polynesian influences, she has helped redefine what people think an 'ukulele can do. Taimane's artistry and technical skill have earned her international acclaim and made her one of Hawai'i's most distinctive musicians.
